

' Māori tū, Māori ora '

Tira

Tū kotahi

TIRA
T Ū K O T A H I

Hai aronga matua

- Relationships - whanaungatanga
- Te ao Māori, Inclusivity / Diversity |

1

He mohio ki te whakahaere i nga korero o te mahi kai

Has command of the knowledge, science and technology of food acquisition and production.

2

... o te tangohanga whare, waka, pataka, hereimu

Has command of the knowledge, technology, rituals, traditions pertaining to the construction and acquisition of houses, canoes, store houses and cooking sheds.

3

Ka mohio ia ki te whakahaere i nga korero mo te whawhai, toa tonu ki te riri, hopu tupapaku tonu atu, whati rawa mai ka riri, nana ano i whakahoki atu te whati

He knows how to conduct discussions on the strategies of warfare and is himself courageous in battle, is not afraid to kill, and can turn adversities into victories.

4

Ko te korero manuhiri ano tetahi*Inviting and welcoming visitors is another (talent).*

5

Ko te korero runanga ano tetahi*Conducting meetings of the people to discuss important issues is another.*

6

Ko te atawhai ano tetahi*Yet another is being able to offer hospitality and to take care of people.*

Whanaungatanga - relationships

- No hea koe | Where are you from ?
- Nā wai koe | Whakapapa - who do you descended from
- Whai i te kōrero | Follow the talk / theme/ thread
- Tāutuutu | Reciprocate
- Reflect to connect

Hai aronga matua

What do you think? | What could this look, feel and sound like in your workplace ?

Hai aronga matua

- Te Arawhiti
- Mahinga kitenga
- Kokonga ngākau

A close-up photograph of a traditional Moko Moko, a wooden keychain used by Māori. The keychain is made of polished wood and features a large, rounded, bulbous body with a textured surface. A long, thin wooden stem extends from the body, ending in a decorative, carved headpiece with intricate patterns and two small blue eyes. A white cord is attached to the stem, and a bundle of dark, feathery material is tied to the top of the bulbous body. The keychain is resting on a thick, green moss-covered log in a natural, outdoor setting with rocks and leaves visible in the background.

Ngā Mihi